

About The Author

Moses Miller is a journalist, a motivational speaker and an award winning author for Mind Candy, LLC, which is a company focused on book publishing, the development of screenplays and educational programming for our youth. A native New Yorker, Moses exhibits the uncanny ability to capture the pulse of the streets with intelligent and well thought out storylines. In the past, he has contributed articles and written for various websites and publications including The Voice, Newsday and 88HIPHOP.COM where he is currently the Editor in Chief of content. He holds a Bachelors degree in Business Management and a Masters of Science degree in Technology Management obtained from Polytechnic University. His first novel, Nan: The Trifling Times of Nathan Jones has received various awards and critical acclaim from readers and book clubs around the world. After the successful release of his first novel, Mr. Miller cemented a deal with F.E.D.S. magazine resulting in a joint venture to publish his second release, Once Upon A Time in Harlem in September of 2007. The highly anticipated second installment in the Nan series, The Game of Trife, was released through Mind Candy, LLC in August of 2008. Mr. Miller is a socially conscious individual who strives to play a key role in helping to improve the literacy rates amongst African American and Hispanic teens. Through his American Me "Voices of Our Youth" program, he has worked with several other organizations in an effort to decrease the high school dropout rates plaguing lower income communities. Mr. Miller's inspirational book The Barack in Me, was written specifically for young African American males, with themes that cross the boundaries of gender and race. Mr. Miller is currently the facilitator for two youth mentoring programs focused on developing upstanding men and community leaders. His latest release, Nan: The Trifecta is the highly anticipated finale to his Nan series.
